Haiku Capital Matsuyama

What's Haiku?

Haiku is a short poem written in 17 sounds (Japanese) which contains one word referring to the season.

The topic should be about nature or people and their feelings.

We usually compose haiku using short, simple words omitting unnecessary detail.

Although there is no unified rule for composing haiku in English, there are various definitions.

According to the Haiku Society of America, haiku is expressed as "A poem recording the essence of a moment keenly perceived, in which nature is linked to human nature". Another example is a poem written as short as possible within 17 syllables, about nature, people or their feelings.
